Disgrace not thy good company ;
If lowly born, so bear thyself,
That gentle blood may come of thee.”

STEBBINS.

The descendants of Rowland Stebbing, who came to this country from England, in 1634, embrace nearly all in New England of the name of Stebbins, as now spelled.

Rowland Stebbing was born in 1594, near Cambridge, in England, and came to America from Ipswich in the ship "Francis," arriving in Boston in 1634. He was accompanied by his wife Sarah, and their children, Thomas, aged 14, Sarah, aged 11, John, aged 8, and Elizabeth, aged 6 years. He settled first in Roxbury, and removed thence to Springfield, Mass., probably because of his friendship in England with William Pynchon, the founder of Springfield. Rowland Stebbing died in Northampton, Dec. 14, 1671. He was accompanied in his removal to Northampton by his son John, whose descendants settled there and in other towns in that vicinity.

The descendants of Thomas settled principally in Longmeadow, Wilbraham, Brimfield, and in the State of Connecticut.

While, as stated above, Rowland Stebbing was the ancestor of a large proportion of those bearing the name of Stebbins in New England, yet the Colonial Records of Massachusetts, early church and town records, especially those of the Town of Roxbury, and of the First Church of Roxbury, show that there were others of the same name contemporary here with him.

EXTRACTS FROM MEMOIR OF STEBBINS FAMILY, BY DANIEL
STEBBINS, M. D., OF NORTHAMPTON.

“The surname Stebbing probably originated in the county of Essex, Eng., where, in the hundred of Hincford, there is a town or parish of Stebbing.

“In this county is found the earliest mention of the name yet discovered, in the Chancery Rolls or Records, 3 John, 1201.

“As to the Stebbing family, few of England’s haughtiest nobles can trace their lineage to a period so remote as they ; and in this country, with the exception of the descendants of the few Jamestown settlers, and the pilgrims of the Mayflower, none can boast an older descent.”

The name Stebbing is of Saxon origin, and descriptive, “ing” meaning field, Stebbing, or Stub-ing, meaning stub-field. The armorial bearings of Stebbing (London and Wisset, County Suffolk). Quarterly, or and gules ; on a bend sable, five bezants. Crest, a lion’s head erased ar.
